ANIMAL ARCHITECTURE SAFARIS

IN MANHATTAN AND BROOKLYN

Lurking in the waters of public fountains, guarding doorways, peeping around cornice corners, running across walls, twining up columns, forming the handles of garden urns...There is a jungle of carved animals and plants inhabiting New York! And each one has a story. Come hunt for fruiting flora and fierce fauna in plain view on buildings and in plazas.

Free one-hour walking tours of animal and plant imagery in architectural ornaments for all ages (donation optional!).

Manhattan Safari: Sunday, April 10, 2011, 11 a.m. Starts at 86th Street and Park Avenue, led by former NYC Parks Commissioner Henry Stern.

Brooklyn Safari: Saturday, April 30, 2011, 11 a.m. Starts at the Brooklyn Public Library steps, Eastern Parkway at Grand Army Plaza, led by Landscape Architect Marcha Johnson.

Please Note: In the case of extreme weather, the safaris will be postponed.
To RSVP, email Morgan@nycivic.org or call 212-564-4441.
