

landscape architecture

Dear Jury Members:

Daniel Winterbottom, ASLA, has become a dynamic figure in bringing the benefits of landscape architecture to poor, marginalized, and underserved populations—populations who often need the benefits of well designed spaces the most and can afford them the least. His built landscapes have benefited people in prisons, poor communities in Mexico and Guatemala, cancer centers, and other underserved groups.

Daniel's work is also innovative in that he always brings students into his projects, so that the projects are part of his mission as educator—and, under his guidance, the students not only design but build the projects.

In both his work with underserved communities and in the design/build aspect of his projects, Daniel is following in the footsteps of the late Karl Linn, FASLA. Please consider Daniel for ASLA's Community Service Award.

J. William Thompson, FASLA
Editor, LAM

